During the course, the subject expert explained that it is the duty of every citizen of India to respect and uphold these Fundamental Rights and Duties, which are the bedrock of our democracy and the progress of our country. The interplay of fundamental rights and duties is pivotal for the progress and harmony of Indian society.

The trainer of the program focused on the Constitution (Eighty-sixth Amendment) Act, 2002 inserted Article 21-A in the Constitution of India to provide free and compulsory education of all children in the age group of six to fourteen years as a Fundamental Right in such a manner as the State may, by law, determine. Fundamental rights and duties are an important part of the Indian constitution. There are six fundamental rights that include the right to equality, right to freedom, right against exploitation, right to freedom of religion, cultural and educational rights, and right to constitutional remedies.

During the course it was discussed elaborately how Sardar Swaran Singh Committee was set up by Congress Party in 1976 to make recommendations about fundamental duties, the need and necessity of which was felt during the operation of the internal emergency (1975–1977). The committee recommended the inclusion of a chapter on fundamental duties in the Constitution.
